Protect your identity

Your Social Security number, may have been an easy way for identification in the past, however with the age of the millennium protecting your social security number is important. With the new age of information available at your fingertips your personal information needs to be private. Your social security number, address, and credit cards should be concealed for your eyes only. This new wave of criminals known as "identity stealers" are intruding on your rights and privacy pretending to be you! Here are some ways to protect yourself:

✓ You do not have to give your SSN to a private business
✓ If you feel providing your SSN of benefit, simply ask the business to give you a copy of their privacy policy
✓ Never provide SSN over the phone or by email
✓ Report ID theft to your local police department
✓   File an id theft complaint on FTC website www.ftc.gov

ATTN: Patrol Officers

Interdiction for the Protection of Children

A course has been developed by the FBI and the Texas Department of Public Safety to make Patrol Officers aware of different resources available to assist them in finding missing children.
